INTRODUCTION

With June 1945 came the realization that one year had passed since the day when the world's attention and hope had been fixed on the Normandy Beaches. In that year, much had changed, especially as pertains to the physical and architectural shape of the enemy. His cities became rubble and his armies a rabble. In one year, what Hitler had boasted would last a thousand years was conquered. Suddenly, a maze of legal and technical questions arose, where only yesterday, there had been but the military question. Words like 'non-fraternization' took the place of 'block-buster', and the Military Governments suddenly became more important than tactical experts. The men of the 100th Group, now that the Group's position as an occupational force had been clearly defined, took an active interest in the many, complicated and varied problems posed by a defeated Germany.

During the month, the Group participated in three flights from England to Casablanca, transporting 1296 passengers in a manner that brought forth commendations from General EUBANK and General HUGLIN.

On 23 June 1945, Colonel SUTTERLIN relinquished his command of the Group, and LT.Colonel JOHN B. WALLACE assumed command. Soon afterwards, a flight was made into Germany for the express purpose of inspecting the site which had been selected for this Group. The findings were announced to all personnel in a letter from Major HORACE L. VARIAN, the Station Adjutant. The news was not too pleasant, and it was rumored that strenuous efforts would be made to get a better location.

Meanwhile, men took their passes and furloughs as they came up, ranging far and wide over this tight Isle from Torquay to Aberdeen and Belfast. In-inevitably, inspections and guard duty were stepped up. The Germans have always shown a healthy respect for strong discipline, and this will undoubtedly be reflected in the severe military courtesy Americans in the occupation forces will be subject to. On 23 June, Lt.Colonel WALLACE inspected the entire base, both as to personnel and installations. Conditions were found to be extremely satisfactory.

The month ended on the usual note of speculation. Would we get a better field? Would the non-fraternization ban be made more lenient (and how could you circumvent it anyhow?)

The biggest event of the month for many men was the fact that the over-85 pointers were shipped out to outfits awaiting shipment back to the States. On the other hand, many lowpoint men were shipped in. Also on the incoming roster were men who had volunteered for occupational duty. The books just about balanced, although it seemed that familiar faces in the mess halls were becoming scarcer.

HEADQUARTERS
AAF STATION # 139
APO 559

4 June 1945.

SUBJECT: 6 June 1945 - First Anniversary of the Assault of the Normandy Beaches.

TO : Commanding Officer.

1. The attached message from General D. D. EISENHOWER will be read to all personnel of your command prior to 6 June 1945.

2. 6 June 1945 will be observed as a holiday on this Station unless operations necessitate a change.

BY ORDER OF COLONEL SUTTERLIN:

(Signed)
CLAUDE L. HOSFORD, Jr.,
Major, Air Corps,
Adjutant.

The following message from the Supreme Commander is to be delivered to every member of all headquarters and units under your command.....

The sixth day of June 1945 marks the first anniversary of the assault of the Normandy Beaches. The intervening year has seen the utter defeat of the enemy forces in this theatre and thereby the complete accomplishment of the primary purpose and aims which inspired this tremendous amphibious operation. The exploits of the combined services during these strenuous months have won the admiration of Allies and neutrals throughout the world and have instilled fear in the hearts of our remaining foe.

We are now engaged on less spectacular but equally important duties. Renewed effort is essential as we shift forces to join our brothers in arms against the Japanese and at the same time deal with the many remaining problems in this theatre. We can but pause briefly on this sixth day of June to pledge anew our full energies to the task before us and to review the momentous events of the year. It is fitting that our celebration of the day should be quiet and strengthen us spiritually and physically for the coming months. Formal ceremonies will be avoided, but insofar as is consistent with the performance of essential duties, June sixth will be observed as a holiday by the Allied Expeditionary Forces.

Signed DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

17 June 1945.

SUBJECT: Commendation.

TO : Commanding Officer, 100th Bombardment Group (H), APO 559.
(Thru: Commanding General, 13th Combat Bombardment Wing).

1. It is a pleasure to commend you and all personnel of the 100th Bombardment Group (H) for the superior manner in which the project of transporting military personnel by air from the United Kingdom to Casablanca was accomplished.

2. In three flights the group transported 1296 passengers a distance of 1450 miles, all with no injury to personnel and no damage to government property.

3. This record testifies to a high level of maintenance, planning and execution at the group level, and reflects favorably on the group, the wing and the Army Air Forces as a whole.

(Signed)
E. L. EUBANK,
Brigadier General, USA
Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS 13TH BOMBARDMENT WING (H), APO 559. 18 June 1945.

TO: Commanding Officer, 100th Bombardment Group (H), APO 559.

1. It is gratifying to forward this commendation for an outstanding non-operational performance which was carried out with all the precision of combat. I wish to add my congratulations for the successful completion of the first of many non-combat operations with which your Group will be charged under your assignment to the Occupational Air Forces.

(Signed)
HAROLD Q. HUGLIN,
Brigadier General, U. S. A.,
Commanding.

The PW Questionnaire

The month of June 1945 was marked by sudden activity in the S-1 Awards Section. After finishing up the more or less routine work and leaning back with a sigh of relief at a job seemingly completed, the door opened one rare and sunny morning, and a little man entered, staggering under the weight of what seemed at least half a 6X6 truckload of forms. These he deposited upon the table, which protested by creaking pitifully.

"These," the little man announced, "are Prisoner of War forms which were filled out by liberated men from the 100th. They are to be screened, tabulated, and such action taken in the way of awards as is deemed necessary."

With that, he spun twice on a pair of worn-out heels, and disappeared in a cloud of dust. Despair settled like coffee grounds to the bottom of a canteen cup upon the awards cubicle. This despair was not lifted any when the door popped open again and the little man stuck his head thru it. "You have ten days to do the work in," he snapped with a leer and slammed the door. A cloud of dust sifted in thru the keyhole.

With an incantation to Zoroaster, the men plunged headlong into the sea of forms. Paper, names, pencilled scrawls flew to the ceiling. Words leaped from pages to eyes, from eyes to minds, from minds to more forms. Stories took shape, stories of combat, of swift enemy aircraft passes, of accurate little black balls which cut and tore aluminum and flesh. Men leaping from flying pyres, trailing silken trains in their wake. Men long thought dead, who were now miraculously resuscitated. The list grew into many pages, and grew some more.

Finally, at 499 forms, the listing was complete. Then the work began in earnest. In the upper right hand corner of each form was jotted down the award that the man was eligible for. Feats consummated over Regensburg in '43, over Hamburg in '44, and over Berlin in '45 were now to be rewarded.

A plane had returned in 1944 with its entire tail compartment shot away. The picture of the tailless plane had made almost every newspaper, both in Britain and the United States. Not much was said about the tail gunner. It was wordlessly supposed that he had been blown into the proverbial smithereens. But S/Sgt Roy Urich popped up in a PW Questionnaire to tell how he had been blown out of the tail in one piece, later to be captured by the Nazis. Every form had its share of heroism, of self-negation. Men gave their lives so that other men might live. Flyers like 2nd Lt. Charles Baker, who with an inoperative C-1 Auto-Pilot, remained at the controls and rode the aircraft into the ground and death so that his crew would have a better chance to bail out.... Returning crewmen from a raid on Hamburg, 31 December 1944, told the story of a mid-air collision, with both aircraft going down. The story was now completed from a PW Form, the story of how Lt. Rojohn and Leek, their plane atop and locked with another B-17, cut their engines, and using their controls plus the engines of the plane underneath, made a successful crash landing in enemy territory..... Every story contained its share of moments-that-seemed-eternities, of the split second that saved or lost lives, the second between the bail-out and the explosion, between the direct flak hit received full in the face or the flak fragment thru one hand.... Luck or fate or what have you.... Pick a card... Pick a form... Here's one written by a 2nd Lt. Lawrence W. Ward. Hamburg, 31 December 1944. (The 100th lost twelve ships on this mission...)

"While we were on the bomb run the tail gunner called out an enemy jet high at six o'clock. In answer I checked the crew for oxygen and gave orders to all the gunners to be especially alert for enemy fighters. All action began just as the squadron dropped their Bombs. I only had time to say 'Bombs Away' when two terrific explosions took place; one under the nose in the chin turret, the other somewhere around the center of the ship. The one under the nose was flak, and pieces of metal seemed to fill the air as they tore thru the plexiglass and aluminum. It was at this moment that I received a hit over the left eye that stunned me. From then on, nothing is clear in my mind as to what happened.

RESTRICTED

"We immediately went into a spin and I remember trying to climb to the escape hatch but didn't have the strength to overcome the other forces. Then the plane straightened into a dive and as I disentangled myself from all the debris I pulled the red cord on my flak suit, and started again for the hatch. In that one quick moment I glimpsed the navigator lying on the catwalk on his elbows looking in my direction. This covered a fraction of a second and then the nose seemed to disintegrate and I passed out.

"When I came to I was in the open air and just automatically pulled the ripcord of my parachute. But nothing happened except the red handle came out - I threw it away and opened the chute by pulling the flaps open. I never remember the jolt of the chute opening - the next thing I knew was that I was dangling by one strap. It was a habit of mine to hook one side of my chute to the harness on the bomb bay, and it never occurred to me to fasten the other side before opening it. By this time, the bleeding of my wound had stopped - evidently because the blood over my face had frozen. However, hanging by one strap prevented me from having any control over myself and I whirled around and around like a top, making me very sick at my stomach.

"I made hasty plans as to evading, but when I landed it was within a fence of a fenced-in estate on the edge of Hamburg. I was immediately surrounded by soldiers and civilians. They took me to a Luftwaffe base where three others from our squadron were being searched and held. One was my waist gunner and he is the one who told me the story of our plane. The other explosion I heard was another plane colliding with us, slicing our plane in half at the ball turret.

"When I was taken prisoner, the wound over my eye thawed out and began to bleed again. I tried to get it bandaged but to no avail, so I bandaged it with a handkerchief, and it was over a month before it finally healed."

Just an average PW story. Multiply that by hundreds of names and deeds, and it becomes obvious that merely sorting the forms into various categories becomes an exacting task.... Four awards for the Silver Star, fifty recommendations for the Distinguished Flying Cross, 256 recommendations for the award of the Purple Heart, 71 recommendations for CIC's to Air Medals for Enemy Aircraft Destroyed were listed and worked on..... And the men who made war were freed, and streamed from the Stalag-Lufts homeward.... The little man never showed up again, and the awards section permitted itself a brief respite, meanwhile looking fearfully at the door.....

Personal Report of the BREMEN Mission, 8 October 1943. Written by Major HARRY H. CROSEY (then 1st Lt.) on 17 October 1943.

1. The prelude to this mission was normal. There had been a couple of days of pre-briefing in which the pilot, navigator, and bombardier made secret trips to air division headquarters. The general idea was that we, and many hundreds of other planes of heavy bombardment were out to "Hamburg" Bremen.

2. The unusual thing on this trip was that we were to lead the Third Combat Wing. This meant additional strain and responsibility on the part of our crew, but it was a load to which we were more or less accustomed after having been in this position a few times previously. Major JOHN B. KIDD, who had done such a creditable job leading the 100th Group on the important Regensburg Raid was the command pilot sharing the piloting duties with Captain EVERETT E. BLAKELY. Our co-pilot, Lt. CHARLES A. VIA, rode in the position of tail gunner serving the vital function of formation control officer. S/Sgt LYLE E. NORD acted as radio gunner and assistant to T/Sgt EDMOND G. FORKNER.

3. Briefing, takeoff and assembly of the group were standard, except that the group formed in the record time of eighteen minutes. The group climbed to 9,000 feet and passed over Bunker Eight, at Framlingham, about forty seconds behind the briefed time of 1246. However, the 100th Group, in the lead position, was joined by the 390th and the 95th without difficulty. The Thirteenth Combat Wing passed over Spalding in excellent defensive position at the exact time as briefed, 1312. By lessing slightly, our combat wing fell into position as scheduled. At 1329 the Fourth Air Division, in unquestionably the best formation flown during my experience, passed over the English Coast nine miles north of Splasher Beacon #4.

4. The course flown was nearly as briefed, but a few minutes were lost due to slight discrepancies in turns and metro data. The journey over water was made unnecessarily hazardous due to the fact that planes which aborted persisted in attempting to fly through our combat wing instead of clearing the formation. On one occasion an entire six ship squadron in good formation flew between the 100th and the 390th Group. Six minutes later, a flight in equally as good formation threaded itself through our formation. Two minutes later a single ship with what appeared to be a "T" marking on the tail, repeated the process.

5. At 1441 $\frac{1}{2}$, our combat wing started the turn onto land near the island of Borkony. At this time we had twenty-one ships on our group formation and our other two groups were in total or nearly complete strength. We crossed the coast at 1456 on course. Although a slight haze and a two-tenths undercast of low status were present, it was possible to tell our exact position by pilotage. Reception on Gee Navigational Equipment failed upon crossing the coast due partially to jamming and lack of strength on transmission of the A marker. We approached Groningen on course and turned toward the Initial Point two miles to the left of course in an effort to clear the combat wing ahead of us.

6. On the approach to the IP, it was observed that Emden, apparently remembering the two previous trips of the Eighth Air Force to that area, had sent up a dense smoke screen. Also, it was noted by several members of the crew that FW 190's, instead of devoting all their efforts on the Fortresses, turned on our escorts in a few cases, and engaged these P-47's in combat. The escort was apparently ahead of us defending the lead combat wing of the air division.

7. The IP was reached at 1521.... Earlier in this narrative I classed this mission as "standard". From this point on, that classification no longer holds true.

8. By now, much of the ground haze had cleared away. My calculations had been proving accurate in my dead reckoning. But all these opportunities to check my navigation were unnecessary. Everyone on the crew knew that the intense black cloud ahead of us marked the vicinity of the target, the town of Bremen. I have been exposed to flak before and hadn't been particularly perturbed by its presence. I remember that in all of these instances, each little ~~buzz~~ burst of "Flieger-abwehr-knöte" was a distinct, mean-looking, little black ball. But now, over Bremen, each little ball had lost its individuality and the whole thing was now blended into a huge, angry cloud. Too late I realized that our combat wing had been briefed to fly at an altitude too similar to that of the previous wing, for we sailed right into the midst of that cloud. I could just visualize the gunners on the ground checking back on their computations and sending up volleys using the same data. . . . At any rate, two minutes before we hit the target, our plane was hit by the first burst of flak. Our ball turret operator, S/Sgt WILLIAM F. MCCLELLAND, announced in a calm voice that his turret had been struck, but not pierced, by a flak burst. From that time his turret operated in a jerky fashion.

9. Thirty seconds before the bombs were dropped, a burst of flak hit our nose compartment, shattering the window to the right of the bombardier's head. One fragment struck the bombardier, Lt. JAMES R. DOUGLASS, in the left side. It tore through his clothing and ripped the cloth of his flak suit but did not touch his skin. Despite this distraction, and I am certain that Lt. DOUGLASS thought he had been injured, he continued the manipulation of his bomb sight and bombs were away at 1525. Even accepting the fact that we had been hit by flak, annoyed by fighters, and had been searching for a target obscured by a smoke screen, our own and PRU photographs show that his bombs were dropped accurately and destructively.

10. A mere matter of seconds later, our Number Four engine was destroyed by flak, the control wires were shattered, and the left elevator was ripped to shreds, plunging our plane into a sort of spinning dive, completely out of control. . . . Just as in the previous paragraph, I wished to emphasize the complete disregard of personal safety on the part of the bombardier as he concentrated on his job of destroying the target, I wish to emphasize a devotion to responsibility far beyond the call of duty in this instance on the part of three members of our crew, and later in this narrative to such actions on the part of the entire personnel of our crew. . . . The situation was this: We were plunging down in a helpless, careening dive. Flames were blazing from our #4 engine. Our control surfaces were all cut and torn. (I might add, parenthetically, that the 95th Group reported later that we were seen to fall into a flat spin, on fire, and that three parachutes were observed to open from our plane.) The normal reaction on the part of our pilots should have been to think of their own personal safety, or in the case of extreme nobility of character perhaps they would have been thinking about the other members of the crew. But they did not, even in this crisis, forget for one moment that they were the leaders of a great formation.

Their first thought was of the crews behind them. In unison, as we fell off into our dive, the words came over the interphone to our tail gunner, "Signal the deputy leader to take over." . . . I can't help thinking that as they fought for their lives, they might have been excused for being too busy to think of their command, but such was not the case. By this signal, the remainder of the formation was notified immediately that we had been hit and were aborting. This act should have prevented any planes being pulled even a few feet out of position into danger from the enemy aircraft buzzing about. (It was the misfortune of the 100th Bomb Group that the deputy leader was destroyed at this time and so many of the flight leaders likewise, that the group was left to do its best by tacking onto the 390th Group.) . . . Back in the radio room, our radio operator, knowing that he was in imminent danger of losing his life, remained at his position and radioed in to wing headquarters that "The target was bombed at 1525."

11. For 3,000 feet, Captain BLAKELY and Major KIDD fought to get that plane under control. It was only because of the superior construction of our bomber, and its perfect maintenance, plus the combination of two skilled pilots, that we ever even recovered from that dive, much less return to our base... If I were an expert on stress and strain analysis, or a mechanic, or even a pilot, I would dwell at length on the manner in which the plane was restored to flying attitude. As it is, the procedure defies my description. But I am certain that it was a very great accomplishment.

12. At 19,000 feet we were thrown to the floor, shaken severely, but when we were able to look out the windows, we were temporarily assured to note that the ground was now in the right place. A hurried consultation was held over interphone to determine a plan for fighting our way back to England. The following facts had to be considered: We had lost all communication back of the top turret, so that it was impossible to determine the extent of damage or injury. Our control wires were fraying as far back as the top turret operator could see. At least two of the crew members had reported being hit immediately after we left the target. One engine was in such bad condition that bits and finally all of the cowling was blasted off. We were losing altitude so rapidly, probably because of the condition of the elevator, that any but the shortest route back was beyond contemplation. . . . So we headed across the face of Germany directly for home.

13. From this point till we crossed the coast at 1635, this narrative is of necessity lacking in details. I wish that I could have been in on the interphone communications which passed between the members in the rear of our ship. For one thing, I could have known the exact number of times we were subjected to tail attacks, and known the exact circumstances under which our gunners destroyed twelve for certain and scored a possible on another enemy aircraft as the Luftwaffe continued its usual policy of singling out a lone plane and concentrating all attacks upon it. As it was, my lack of information and the fact that I was so busy getting us in the proper direction for home didn't click with the information of our intelligence service and their Radar control, and we received credit for only the destruction of seven planes. But every member of the crew is positive of twelve. . . . We've always known that we had a good crew. Way back in 1942, when the 100th Bomb Group was first formed, the first crew which served as the nucleus of the group was LT. BLAKELY's crew. It had been formed from selected material from three first phase schools. This condition caused the crew to suffer the stigma of being called the "model crew". And Lt. BLAKELY kept them good. His conscientiousness caused them to get more flying hours in training than any other crew. They held several engineering records such as a flight for endurance and maximum performance which lasted for seventeen hours and which drew for them commendations from a General the the Second Air Force. I personally am a recent addition to the crew, necessitated when their regular navigator was appointed Group Navigator. . . . But with all of this, aside from being "regular guys", and devoted to duty, our gunners waited until that day to not only prove themselves but also to illustrate just how vitally important it is that all crew members must be tops at their jobs when that time comes.

14. As we ploughed across Germany with Captain BLAKELY and Major KIDD carefully nursing the loss of each precious foot of altitude and flying at 120 miles an hour, we were subjected to the threat of innumerable attacks from enemy fighters. I will say that there were other straggling Fortresses who received a lot harsher treatment than we did that day. And I will also venture a reason for this fact. Ahead of us, a lone B-17 was limping along. A flight of three Messerschmidts were harassing it, darting in and out but not attacking. Finally, all three swooped in and fired for a long time at the bomber. The bomber didn't go down, but neither did any of the fighters. And those three small planes kept attacking that plane, receiving no damage to themselves, till finally the plane caught on fire. It was with a helpless feeling that we saw our last ally turn over, spin slightly, and then burst into a huge ball of flame. . . . Now the victorious Germans turned on us. And now comes the reason that we were able to return. From that point on, there wasn't a single attack made upon us in which an enemy aircraft was not destroyed. I believe that T/Sgt MONROE B. THORNTON got the first one. On this attack which came slightly from the right, Sgt. THORNTON began to fire when the fighter was about 800 yards away. At about 300 yards, the effect of his firing began to show and the aircraft's propellor fell off. Lt. DOUGLASS and I both saw the pilot jump. . . . THORNTON got a couple of others too. One of them was an ME109. It came at us high and from the right side. Another plane was flying with it in a stacked, slightly echeloned position. Thorny says that it was firing at us before he was able to get his sights on either plane. The right engine of the fighter caught on fire and pieces flew off the left engine or wing. Our left waist gunner saw two occupants bail out and both chutes open. . . . THORNTON's third came very near the Holland border.

15. Lt. DOUGLASS got one. It was a JU 88 that flipped around a long time before it came in on us. It came in to about 300 yards and ended up in a vertical bank with its belly towards us. I saw almost the entire tail assembly shatter off before it went into a spin. Smoke was pouring from its rear as it went down.

16. Three minutes later another JU 88 came at us from 10 o'clock. I was positive that my shots were hitting at its exposed belly but the plane did not go down. It made no more attacks.

17. Back in the tail, waist and radio compartments, our gunners were paying a heavier price for their planes. About the time that we went over the target, Lt. VIA had reported being hit. We didn't know whether he meant his compartment or himself. That hit was a serious flesh wound in his right leg, but this did not stop his firing. As nearly as we can tell from his and the waist gunners reports, Lt. VIA destroyed his first for that day soon after THORNTON hit his number one. Two ME 210s came together after hovering for some time at 1000 yards. Lt. VIA picked out the second one and the left waist gunner and radio gunner say that it disintegrated in midair. His second claim was the partner of the one that our top turret gunner destroyed. THORNTON saw it blow up nearly 500 yards out. . . . Credit must be given to Lt. VIA's shooting, but when another fact is considered.

his performance can be called truly heroic. In between his first and second planes, Lt. VIA had had a projectile pass from the fat of his hip through his pelvis, sever his sciatic nerve, open several blood vessels and pass out on his hip. Yet even with this horrible injury, Lt. VIA stuck to his position and didn't come out till we had crossed the enemy coast.

18. I hope that mentioning them in any certain order won't detract from the heroism of any of the gunners. S/Sgt LYLE E. NORD was pretty busy scratching flak fragments out of his face, head, neck and clothing, but he still managed to bring down a fighter from a difficult position. Two ME 210's came in stacked up from about 600 yards out. NORD took one of them and our left waist gunner the other. The plane kept coming in to 250 yards before his desperation attack was stopped. The Plane side slipped to the right, then blew up. Pieces of the fighter splattered against our plane.

19. I've saved the waist gunners till now. They each got two, but the price was infinitely great. S/Sgt. EDWARD S. YEVICH has a double compound fracture in his forearm and a deep gash in his leg. S/Sgt. LESTER W. SAUNDERS fought a gallant fight against death but succumbed in a hospital bed one week after our return. YEVICH had been seared across the back by flak fragments at the target and so had a grudge against the first fighter who approached from the left side. He got it going away and two members of the crew saw it explode in midair. SAUNDERS, at the other waist window, had already knocked down his first fighter by now too.. (It was an ME 210.) Almost immediately after YEVICH's first went down, a 20-millimeter shell tore through the left waist window into the pit of Sgt. SAUNDER's stomach and hurled him back against the other side of the plane. I believe that it was the identical shell which struck YEVICH's gun and ricocheted into his arm. Yet in this gravely wounded condition, both gunners retained their positions and each of them destroyed another fighter.

20. After this first remark, we hadn't heard much from S/Sgt. WILLIAM F. McCLELLAND. It wasn't till after our crash landing that I learnt why. He had destroyed two aircraft with his damaged turret before he himself was hit. The first flak that hit him tore deeply into his scalp. Later, another burst, or perhaps an exploding 20-MM scraped his face and made shreds of his oxygen mask, headset and clothing. Somewhere along the line, he received an injection of flak in his leg. When the last volley rendered his turret useless -- the door was blown clear off -- he climbed out into the radio compartment. As we crossed the Dutch coast, another burst of flak hit the flak suit on which he was lying and threw him into a bloody heap.

21. All this time, the pilots had been busy piloting and I was occupied with navigating. The terrain was distinctive so it wasn't difficult to stay on the selected course. I did try to use the Gee bob and I am positive I would have had a fix at 8,000 feet over German-Holland, but some sort of projectile came through the floor and shattered the cathode tube. The radio, along with most of the electrical equipment, was long since non-functional..... We crossed Germany and Holland on a line thirty miles north of Lingein, Ommen, and Zwolle. We evaded all known flak areas and large towns. I remember a feeling of futility I experienced once when explosions burst in and around our compartment. I was so certain that we were safe from flak areas, yet here it was, all around us. I yelled out over the interphone for someone to tell me where the flak was coming from. The bombardier told me that those explosions were from 20MM shells. I didn't feel any better..... I recall another instance when the bombardier turned around and looked at me. Two holes appeared on each side of the compartment, and cotton batting sifted down as a bullet went between us. I don't remember his looking back at me again. [REDACTED]

22. I hadn't even considered the coastal batteries. At our usual altitude, they didn't bother us at all. But at 7,000 feet flying at 120 miles per hour, even pop-guns would have been a menace.. They threw everything at us. Whole acres of some sort of a light gun flashed up at our ship. Tracers from machine guns laced all around us. In credit to their gunnery we can say that we were hit plenty. Our number three engine, which had been revolving feebly, now was non-existent. The whole situation was a series of cracking noises much like the closing of a book, as volley after volley hit their target. Captain BLAKELY and Major KIDD were risking everything in some last and violent evasive action. One of them would see flak on one side and jerk the plane on one heading. The other would spot some on his side and back we would go. Their efforts were effective and we got through this last defense.

23. We had survived everything that the Germans could send up at us, but there was still one thing to consider -- gravity. Crossing the coast had cost plenty and we were now at 3,990 feet and sinking rapidly. Major KIDD asked for a heading to the closest part of England and I gave it to him.

24. My ETA ran out and then some. As I checked back over my figures I glanced at my airspeed indicator and thought it looked suspiciously immobile. I rapped on it with my fist and the needle dropped to zero. It was then that I learned from a consultation with the pilot that we were making only 120 miles an hour instead of 150 as I had believed. I hurriedly redid my calculations and gave a correction in our heading. But I knew that we were a long way from home.

25. Ditching seemed the next answer. Lt. DOUGLASS went back to make the preparations.. Two minutes later he was back with the news that we couldn't ditch, that our crew members were in too bad conditions to endure the movements ditching would cause. Moreover, our dinghy compartment was in shreds and at least one of them was in ribbons. . . . That was the first that we in the front had learned of the severity of the situation in the rear of the plane. . . . Our next move was to lighten the load of the aircraft. We threw everything away. Our guns went first and the ammunition with them. I threw away my flying equipment, my Gee box, radio, anything with even an ounce of weight. Now comes an amazing fact: Although our airspeed still remained at 115-120 miles per hour, a very small number of miles above the stalling speed of our plane, Captain BLAKELY not only managed to keep the plane even but actually gained three hundred feet of altitude!

26. England seemed so far away. The ship was listing in such an attitude that our floating aperiodic compass stuck on the side. I figured where the sun should hit the plexiglass front of the plane and called the pilot to correct him whenever the sun shifted on the glass.

27. We hit England at 52° 47' N.; 01° 37' E. By now our gas problem was serious. The first airport sighted, at Ludham, seemed large enough and occupied, so we prepared for a crash landing.

28. Most of us ganged up in the radio compartment. Sgt. SAUNDERS walked unaided to the radio compartment and smiled at us as we hustled about. I didn't dream how seriously he was injured. . . . When Sgt. McCLELLAND, in his dazed condition, noticed the excitement, he thought we were being attacked again and tried to crawl to his turret to help ward off the fighters. It was almost impossible to stop him.

29.I do not intend to omit the conduct of T/Sgt. EDMUND G. FORENER. He has always seemed young and perhaps excitable, but he was all there on this trip. He had completely stopped the flow of blood from all wounds, and had disinfected all injuries. He had calmed his patients with morphine. He had them all covered with blankets to lessen the shock of the approaching landing and the mental shock of their pain. He had encouraged them all during the crossing. Moreover, even though his key had been shot away, he still managed to send out distress signals by pounding his finger on his throat mike.

30. THORNTON cradled LT. VIA with his body in the waist, since the latters condition prevented his being moved. The rest of us cushioned ourselves as best we could for a landing we ~~xxx~~ knew was going to be rough.

31. And it was. The tail wheel hadn't come down. The brakes were gone. One elevator was useless. Nothing worked properly at all, and even the hydraulic system failed. And to add to it all, just as we hit the ground the frayed cables to the rudder snapped. From then on, even the pilots were just riding.

32. Two large trees stood close together and the plane, now completely beyond control, veered toward them. The largest one was hit while the plane was travelling about fifty miles per hour. Luckily, it passed between the number two engine and the pilot's compartment, so we were swung around instead of being jerked to a halt. Nevertheless, the nose compartment was completely destroyed.

33. But we were on the ground. Even the triumph of this was negated when we learned that we had picked an unused field. The planes we had seen on the perimeters were dummies. And medical aid was still two hours away. We did everything we could. Aid was summoned immediately. The rockets we had fired had been seen from Coltishall, so it wasn't long till some RAF medical officers arrived. We are extremely grateful to F/Lt. NOLAN of the Coltishall RAF Base for his medical care. . . . Two ambulances arrived and our four wounded men, all busily engaged in cheering each other up, were loaded into them and soon were under expert medical care at the Norwich and Norfolk General Hospital.

34. I hope I haven't omitted any of the details. I know I haven't recreated any of the actualities.

35. It is my understanding that this narrative will be read, edited and corrected by Major KIDD, and all members of the crew before it is accepted as the true log of this, our Mission to Bremen.

MOVIES FOR JUNE

Sixteen films graced the screen at the Base Flickerie during the months, ranging from excellent to bad, in the usual proportion which doesn't reflect too much credit upon either the good taste or sense of the Hollywood moguls. However, a month which saw the Sincerity of "WILSON" and the music of Chopin ("A SONG TO REMEMBER") is not to be sniffed at. Of course, "MEET MISS BOBBY SOCKS", "TAHITI NIGHTS", "THE MARKED MAN and "SERGEANT MIKE" joined forces to lower the boom on any effort to raise the general average to even mediocre. In the revival department, "CLAUDIA" rang the bell, followed by "SEVEN SWEETHEARTS" and the "THE DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE"..... "BETWEEN TWO WOMEN" found the unfortunate Van Johnson beset by both Marilyn Maxwell and Gloria DeHaven, with Lionel Barrymore hamming at his heels too. The dresses that both gals almost wore pleased the audience, always on the lookout for the better things..... Another revival, which done snuck in surreptitiously, was "HOT SPOT", or to use the title of the book, "I WAKE UP SCREAMING." This added a note of rather ironic coincidence to the months fare, since "HANGOVER SQUARE" also played. The films happened to be Laird Cregar's first and last efforts..... Maria Montez flashed her technicolored thighs in "GYPSY WILDCAT".... Eve Arden didn't have a chance in "SHE COULDN'T SAY NO", altho she should have accentuated that negative perogative..... "HERE COME THE WAVES" was a welcome treat, with Der Bingle and La Hutton doing some fancy vocals. Seeing Betty act as her twin sister acting as Betty was somewhat confusing but funny.... The month ended with "THE UNSEEN", a modern ghost story. It didn't scare too many people....

351st Bombardment Squadron History for June 1945....

June 1945 saw an exodus of old faces and an influx of new. Many of the men leaving had been with the 100th Group ever since the days of Walla Walla and Wendover Field, having been welded into a more than competent team since those early, groping days. The job completed, and with the critical score of 85 or more having been attained, the men crammed their belongings into duffle bags and left for groups scheduled to go to the States. Among the men leaving were familiar names like Cpl. Matthew J Perkovich, Cpl. Neal D Nelligan, S/Sgt Doyle A Cameron, S/Sgt George Walton, Sgt. Carey D Waters, T/Sgt Lloyd M Holland, Sgt William J Biegel, Sgt Melvin A Warnock, PFC Alexander A Wolinski, Cpl Arnold L Schluter, Cpl Walter C Christopher, Sgt Floyd M Carlson, Sgt Ralph A Fritts, S/Sgt Norman A Brett, Sgt Roger C Dittman, PFC John H Young, Pvt LeRoy O Wabaunsee, M/Sgt Louis D Montgomery, S/Sgt John A Bergstrom, T/Sgt George G Farley, S/Sgt Serenus F Barrett, PFC Grover C Gulbransen, M/Sgt John B Cannon, Cpl Antonio M G apuchino, S/Sgt James R Schollard, T/Sgt Warren A Rosenberg, Sgt John Ballek, Cpl Manuel P Furtado, Sgt Charles E Cunningham, Sgt Sherman M Nelson, Cpl Joe E Clopton, M/Sgt Wiley B Harrison, M/Sgt Robert E Hargrave, M/Sgt Kenneth A Lemmons, M/Sgt John J Parmentier, M/Sgt Joseph L Picard, M/Sgt Edwin G Seidel, M/Sgt Harold D Wildrick, T/Sgt John D Pearson, Cpl Joseph S Wylie, Sgt Harry V Burt, Sgt Frank T Alsleben, Cpl Paul C Deane, M/Sgt Emmett D Swank, Sgt William P Gorman, Cpl Averil M Hanna, T/Sgt Phillip H Goodwin, S/Sgt Leonard G Wolfkiel, S/Sgt Nels O Davidson, Sgt Charles W Schultz, Sgt Elvin A Burgess and S/Sgt Clarence G Vorpalh.

Also leaving the Squadron was Lt. Colonel Harry F Cruver, who left behind a record as one of the most-liked Commanding Officers the 351st Squadron ever boasted of. However, the Colonel did not leave the Group, but assumed new responsibilities as Air Executive and Station Deputy for Operations. The official leave-taking took place on 19 June 1945, in the form of a letter prominently displayed on all bulletin boards in the Squadron Area. The letter reads:

HEADQUARTERS
ONE HUNDREDTH BOMBARDMENT GROUP (H), AAF
Office of the Air Executive
APO # 559

19 June 1945

SUBJECT: Relief From Organization.

TO : All members Of The 351st Bombardment Squadron (H), AAF.

1. It is with a great deal of regret that I relinquish my command of the 351st Bombardment Squadron. I should feel much more concerned if I were departing the station, but since I will remain in the group I feel there will always be a home in your unit. For this reason I have written this letter rather than calling a squadron meeting and announcing my leaving and your new commanding officer.

2. I can say here, without hesitation, that in my six years of commissioned service I have never been privileged to work with and take credit for such a fine organization of men. I consider the most fortunate single thing that occurred since coming overseas was my assignment to the 351st. I approached my work as if it were to be a life time assignment and now that the time has come for me to go my wish is that this could only be true. Every commander, though, must think of the time when he will be relieved and his tasks be taken over by a successor. I know that you will give your new commanding officer, Major Milling, the same whole-hearted cooperation that you have demonstrated to me in the last six months. I am sorry that I could not get to know each one of you individually in all sections, but you no doubt appreciate that this is difficult with such a large total strength. Likewise, nothing could have given me greater pleasure than to see scores of you deserving men advanced to ratings which your long and unremitting efforts certainly warrant.

3. I hope the near future will permit all of you with high point scores and even others to be returned to your homes and families.

4. You have, each one of you, done an enviable job. May the best fortune and success go with you all. This I write as one who shall be forever grateful for your association.

(Signed)
HARRY F. CRUVER,
Lt. Col., Air Corps,
Air Executive.

Major John B. Milling assumed command of the 351st Bombardment Squadron. In a meeting prior to pay call on 30 June, the Major spoke to the men in a serious vein, frankness being the keynote. Any movement to be made by the Squadron would be discussed with the personnel. There were to be no secret shifts, and all news pertinent to their welfare would be made public. He divulged the news that the move to the Continent was scheduled for 20 August, and that we were to be stationed at a little town called Lechfield. The meeting was adjourned for pay call, after which the shuffling of pasteboards and the rattle of ivory cubes predominated.

During the month, the three pet peeves of the G.I. life reared their heads in ever-increasing fury, taking much joie out of vivre. In general order of detestation, 1. K.P., 2. Guard Duty, and 3. Inspections. Guard duty, which had been hitherto pulled approximately once every three months, was stepped up to more than once a month, as the Squadron had to furnish eight men per day under the new set-up of a twenty-four hour guard. K.P.'s were detailed for seven day duty. Inspections were held every Saturday morning, and the results were gratifying.

Calisthenics were held three times per week, and until the Squadron was bequeathed a field, lengthy treks were made out to the line, where the men did the Air Corps Hop, push-ups, and attempted to hit an inoffensive ball over an interfering net. A farmer living next to the Squadron living site was extremely gracious about the men using his field as the center of softball. The field became the battlefront for close pitchers battles of the 23-18 variety. Throw-ins from the outfield usually ended up by conking infielders on the head, and bunts were beaten out for home runs. A good time was had by all....

During the month, Captain Eugene J. Kraft was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for his work in the Armament and Ordnance Sections, and S/Sgt Archie L. Abney also received the Bronze Star Medal for his achievements in the Group Training Office.....Three Distinguished Flying Crosses were awarded, to 1st Lts. Robert M. Wells, and Lawrence J. Lazzari and Captain Robert C. Ellis.

The Squadron took part in the Casablanca missions, during which 1296 passengers were carried from England to North Africa, a feat accomplished without an accident.

The month ended as the men of the organization dropped their shillings into a box marked "Beer Party Money." And so the 351st awaited July.

SECRET

349th B Sq.

During the month of June 45 the Squadron experienced a considerable turnover in personnel, both officer's and enlisted men. With the Theater redeployment program becoming increasingly active, enlisted men with a critical Army Service Rating Score who could be released as non-essential, were transferred to other units scheduled for return to the Zone of the Interior. A small percentage of those with lower ASR scores within the category slated for direct redeployment to an active theater were also re-assigned. Other transfers from the organization included ground and combat personnel eligible for redeployment through the States for recuperation and retraining, however, this group was on a limited scale.

Personnel records of the Squadron, formerly maintained by the Base Personnel Office, were moved to the Squadron Orderly Room during the first part of the month. These records included the officer's WD AGO forms 66-1, 66-2, and 201 files; enlisted personnel records, WD AGO forms 20, Qualification Card; and Service Records, WD AGO forms 24, and 201 files. This arrangement made it necessary to establish the Squadron personnel office in a separate building from the orderly room, since space was insufficient for the additional records and personnel clerks. The orderly room, under the direction of 1st Sgt Thomas, is used as the headquarters for passes, furloughs, billeting, and details such as KP and Guard Duty directly involving the men. The removal of personnel records to an adjoining building has proved satisfactory in allowing more room for the work to be done both in the orderly room and personnel office.

The major operational missions flown by the Squadron during the month were two (2) Troop Ferrying Missions to Casablanca, and one (1) Prisoner of War Mission to Station R-87 on the Continent.

On 2 June 45 the first Troop Ferrying Mission was flown by eighteen (18) officer's, eighteen (18) enlisted men and six (6) aircraft. Personnel of a B-24 Bombardment Group were flown to Casablanca on this mission.

The Prisoner of War Mission on 3 June was flown by thirty three (33) officer's, twenty two (22) enlisted crew members with ten (10) aircraft taking part in the transportation of French prisoners of war from Austria to France.

Air Force Combat personnel were transported to Casablanca on 4 June 45 on the second Troop Ferrying Mission of the month. Crew members and aircraft remained overnight at Casablanca on this mission, returning to the Base the next day. Eighteen (18) officer's, eighteen (18) enlisted men, and six (6) aircraft of the Squadron took part in the operation.

Key members and assignments in the Squadron commanded by Major John S. ROBINSON include the following:

Executive Officer:	Capt Jack N. MARSH
Adjutant :	1st Lt Leonard J. ROSENFIELD (DS from 412th Air Sv Gp)
Operations Off. :	Major Robert W. HENSEY

SATURDAY JUNE 16: OUR MAIL MAN TOOK SICK TODAY. SGT EDWARD C CONNORS WAS TAKEN TO THE 65TH, WE HEAR HE HAS PNEUMONIA. GUESS THIS SPELL OF WARM WEATHER PROVED HIS UNDOING. WE'RE BEGINNING TO TAKE AN INTEREST IN THE PRELIMINARY SKIRMISHES OF THE ENGLISH ELECTIONS. THE P.X. GET A GOODLY SUPPLY OF LONDON PAPERS, THE "DAILY MAIL", "DAILY EXPRESS", "DAILY MIRROR", "OBSERVER", "DAILY DISPATCH", "DAILY SKETCH" WHICH OFFER ALL SHADES OF OPINION. WE MUSN'T FORGET THE LEFTIST "DAILY HERALD". IT STILL SURPRISES US AT TIMES THAT THESE PAPERS CHANGE THEIR NAMES FOR THE SUNDAY EDITION. THE COLUMN ABOUT AFFAIRS AMERICAN IN THE EXPRESS IS WIDELY READ. USUALLY THE P.X. OPENS AT 0900 HOURS. BY 1000 HOURS ALL PAPERS ARE GONE.

SUNDAY JUNE 17: SOME MORE LEFT TODAY, M/SGT ARDEN H. EGBERT TRANSFERED TO THE 70 REINFORCEMENT DEPOT. CPL HARRY J COYNE, CPL REGIS JOYCE WENT TO THE 92 COMBAT WING. 1ST LT MYRON TERHUNE CAME INTO THE SQUADRON FROM THE 351ST SQUADRON.

MONDAY JUNE 18: SGT IRVING WASSERMAN COMES BACK FROM DS AT 3RD AD HQ TODAY. 3 1ST LTS, 1 2ND LT, 3 S/SGT, 1 T/SGT, 1 SGT WERE ASSIGNED TO US FROM THE 351ST, SO 161 HQ AAF STATION 139. 1 CAPT, 2 1ST LTS, 4 T/SGT 3/S/SGTS WENT TO THE 351ST IN RETURN, SO 160.

TUESDAY JUNE 19: PVT CHARLES SCANLON IS BACK WITH US AGAIN, RELEASED FROM THE GUBRD HOUSE, AWAY FROM THE HONEY BUCKET DETAILS. 2ND LT JOHN W STACK IS PROMOTED TO 1ST LT. 1ST LT. CHARLES F. DIXON IS TRANSFERED FROM THE 351ST AS A DUTY PILOT.

WEDNESDAY JUNE 20: LT DIXON WASN'T WITH US LONG. TODAY HE GOES BACK TO THE 351ST. 1ST LT. EARL HILMAR COMES IN FROM THE SAME SQUADRON.

Handling of Money Order transactions by Unit Mail Clerks - TM 12-275, FM 12-105, and the booklet "The Army Mail Service" clearly provide that unit mail clerks are not authorized to handle money, issue orders, stamps, or C.O.D. items as part of their official postal duties. It is not a part of their duties to accept money to be used later for the purchase of money orders for members of their organizations or units, and no authority exists for such action. Their principal duty is the delivery and collection of mail and is to be distinguished from duties of Army mail clerks, including bonded regimental or similar unit mail clerks so designated, who are appointed under the provisions of Public Law 238, 77th Congress, primarily for the handling of money order, stamp and registry services.

Return of Diaries - Personnel who have submitted diaries to the Base Censor may have these diaries returned by forwarding a request to Chief Base Censor, Base Censor Office 3, APO 640, US Army. The name, rank and serial number of the owner and, if available, the diary file number, indicated on the receipt returned to the owner at time of submitting the diary, will be included in this request.

Identity, movement, and destination of units - Information concerning identity, movement, and destination of units to the Z of I or QAF is no longer classified. Personnel may be told unit is going to United States or Germany as case may be with approximate date of departure. There is no censorship objection to the inclusion of such information in letters to the Z of I. Specific locations on Continent and complete lists of units joining QAF is still secret information.

Trans-Atlantic telephone calls - The following procedure will be followed when making a call to the United States from this Base: (a) Ask Base operator to connect you with "Trunks", and tell him it is for an overseas call. (b) When "Trunks" (which is the civilian operator) is reached, give her whatever information needed to book your call. This information would include telephone number desired, call to be made 'Collect', number and extension where you can be reached (Diss 260, Ext ?). (c) The "Trunks" operator will tell you when (what day) your call will be booked for. It will be necessary for you to be at your extension on that day and remain there--calls will not be transferred from one extension to another on the Base, trying to find the caller. (d) Absolutely no calls will be accepted if they are to be paid for on this end. Only 'Reverse Charges' calls will be made from this Base. This also applies to all telephone boxes (public telephones) in England. (e) It is suggested, however, that anyone wishing to make a call to the States, postpone it for at least two or three weeks. Information at the present is that overseas calls are booked up for the next five days.

Money Orders - Money Orders purchased at Station Post Office need no longer be counter-signed by unit commanders.

Complaint Hour - The Group Air Inspector will be available in his office during the hours 1600 to 1700 each Friday to receive personal complaints.

RECORDED

During the month of June 45 the Squadron experienced a considerable turnover in personnel, both officer's and enlisted man. With the Theater redeployment program becoming increasingly active, enlisted men with a critical Army Service Rating Score who could be released as non-essential, were transferred to other units scheduled for return to the Zone of the Interior. A small percentage of those with lower ASR scores within the category slated for direct redeployment to an active theater were also reassigned. Other transfers from the organization included ground and combat personnel eligible for redeployment through the States for recuperation and retraining, however, this group was on a limited scale.

Personnel records of the Squadron, formerly maintained by the Base Personnel Office, were moved to the Squadron Orderly Room during the first part of the month. These records included the officer's WD AGO forms 66-1, 66-2, and 201 files; enlisted personnel records, WD AGO forms 20, Qualification Card; and Service Records, WD AGO forms 24, and 201 files. This arrangement made it necessary to establish the Squadron personnel office in a separate building from the orderly room, since space was insufficient for the additional records and personnel clerks. The orderly room, under the direction of 1st Sgt Thomas, is used as the headquarters for passes, furloughs, billeting, and details such as KP and Guard Duty directly involving the men. The removal of personnel records to an adjoining building has proved satisfactory in allowing more room for the work to be done both in the orderly room and personnel office.

The major operational missions flown by the Squadron during the month were two (2) Troop Ferrying Missions to Casablanca, and one (1) Prisoner of War Mission to Station R-37 on the Continent.

On 2 June 45 the first Troop Ferrying Mission was flown by eighteen (18) officer's, eighteen (18) enlisted men and six (6) aircraft. Personnel of a B-24 Bombardment Group were flown to Casablanca on this mission.

The Prisoner of War Mission on 5 June was flown by thirty three (33) officer's, twenty two (22) enlisted crew members with ten (10) aircraft taking part in the transportation of French prisoners of war from Austria to France.

Air Force Combat personnel were transported to Casablanca on 4 June 45 on the second Troop Ferrying Mission of the month. Crew members and aircraft remained overnight at Casablanca on this mission, returning to the Base the next day. Eighteen (18) officer's, eighteen (18) enlisted men, and six (6) aircraft of the Squadron took part in the operation.

Key members and assignments in the Squadron commanded by Major John S. ROBINSON include the following:

351st Bombardment Squadron History for June 1945....

June 1945 saw an exodus of old faces and an influx of new. Many of the men leaving had been with the 100th Group ever since the days of Walla Walla and Endover Field, having been welded into a more than competent team since those early, groping days. The job completed, and with the critical score of 85 or more having been attained, the men packed their belongings into duffle bags and left for groups scheduled to go to the States. Among the men leaving were familiar names like Cpl. Matthew J Pericovich, Cpl. Neal D Belligan, S/Sgt Doyle A Cameron, S/Sgt George Halton, Sgt. Carey D Waters, T/Sgt Lloyd H Holland, Sgt William J Biagai, Sgt Melvin A Warrack, PFC Alexander A Wolinski, Cpl Arnold L Schluter, Cpl Walter C Christopher, Sgt Floyd N Carlson, Sgt Ralph A Fritte, S/Sgt Norman A Brett, Sgt Roger C Dittman, PFC John H Young, Pvt LeRoy O Wabunsee, M/Sgt Louis D Montgomery, S/Sgt John A Bergstrom, T/Sgt George G Parley, S/Sgt Serenus F Barrett, PFC Grover C Galbraaten, M/Sgt John B Cannon, Cpl Antonio M Capanchino, S/Sgt James R Schallard, T/Sgt Warren A Rosenberg, Sgt John Ballek, Cpl Manuel P Purtado, Sgt Charles B Cunningham, Sgt Sherman H Nelson, Cpl Joe E Clepton, M/Sgt Wiley B Harrison, M/Sgt Robert E Margrave, M/Sgt Kenneth A Lummus, M/Sgt John J Pamentier, M/Sgt Joseph L Picard, M/Sgt Edwin G Seidal, M/Sgt Harold D Wildrick, T/Sgt John D Pearson, Cpl Joseph S Wylie, Sgt Harry V Burt, Sgt Frank T Alalsben, Cpl Paul C Deane, M/Sgt Emmett D Swank, Sgt William P Goman, Cpl Averil M Hanna, T/Sgt Phillip H Goodwin, S/Sgt Leonard G Wolficial, S/Sgt Neil C Davidson, Sgt Charles W Schmitz, Sgt Elvin A Burgess and S/Sgt Clarence G Vorpahl.

Also leaving the Squadron was Lt. Colonel Harry F Craver, who left behind a record as one of the most-liked Commanding Officers the 351st Squadron ever boasted of. However, the Colonel did not leave the Group, but assumed new responsibilities as Air Executive and Station Deputy for Operations. The official leave-taking took place on 19 June 1945, in the form of a letter prominently displayed on all bulletin boards in the Squadron Area. The letter reads:

HEADQUARTERS
Office of the Air Executive
APO # 599

19 June 1945

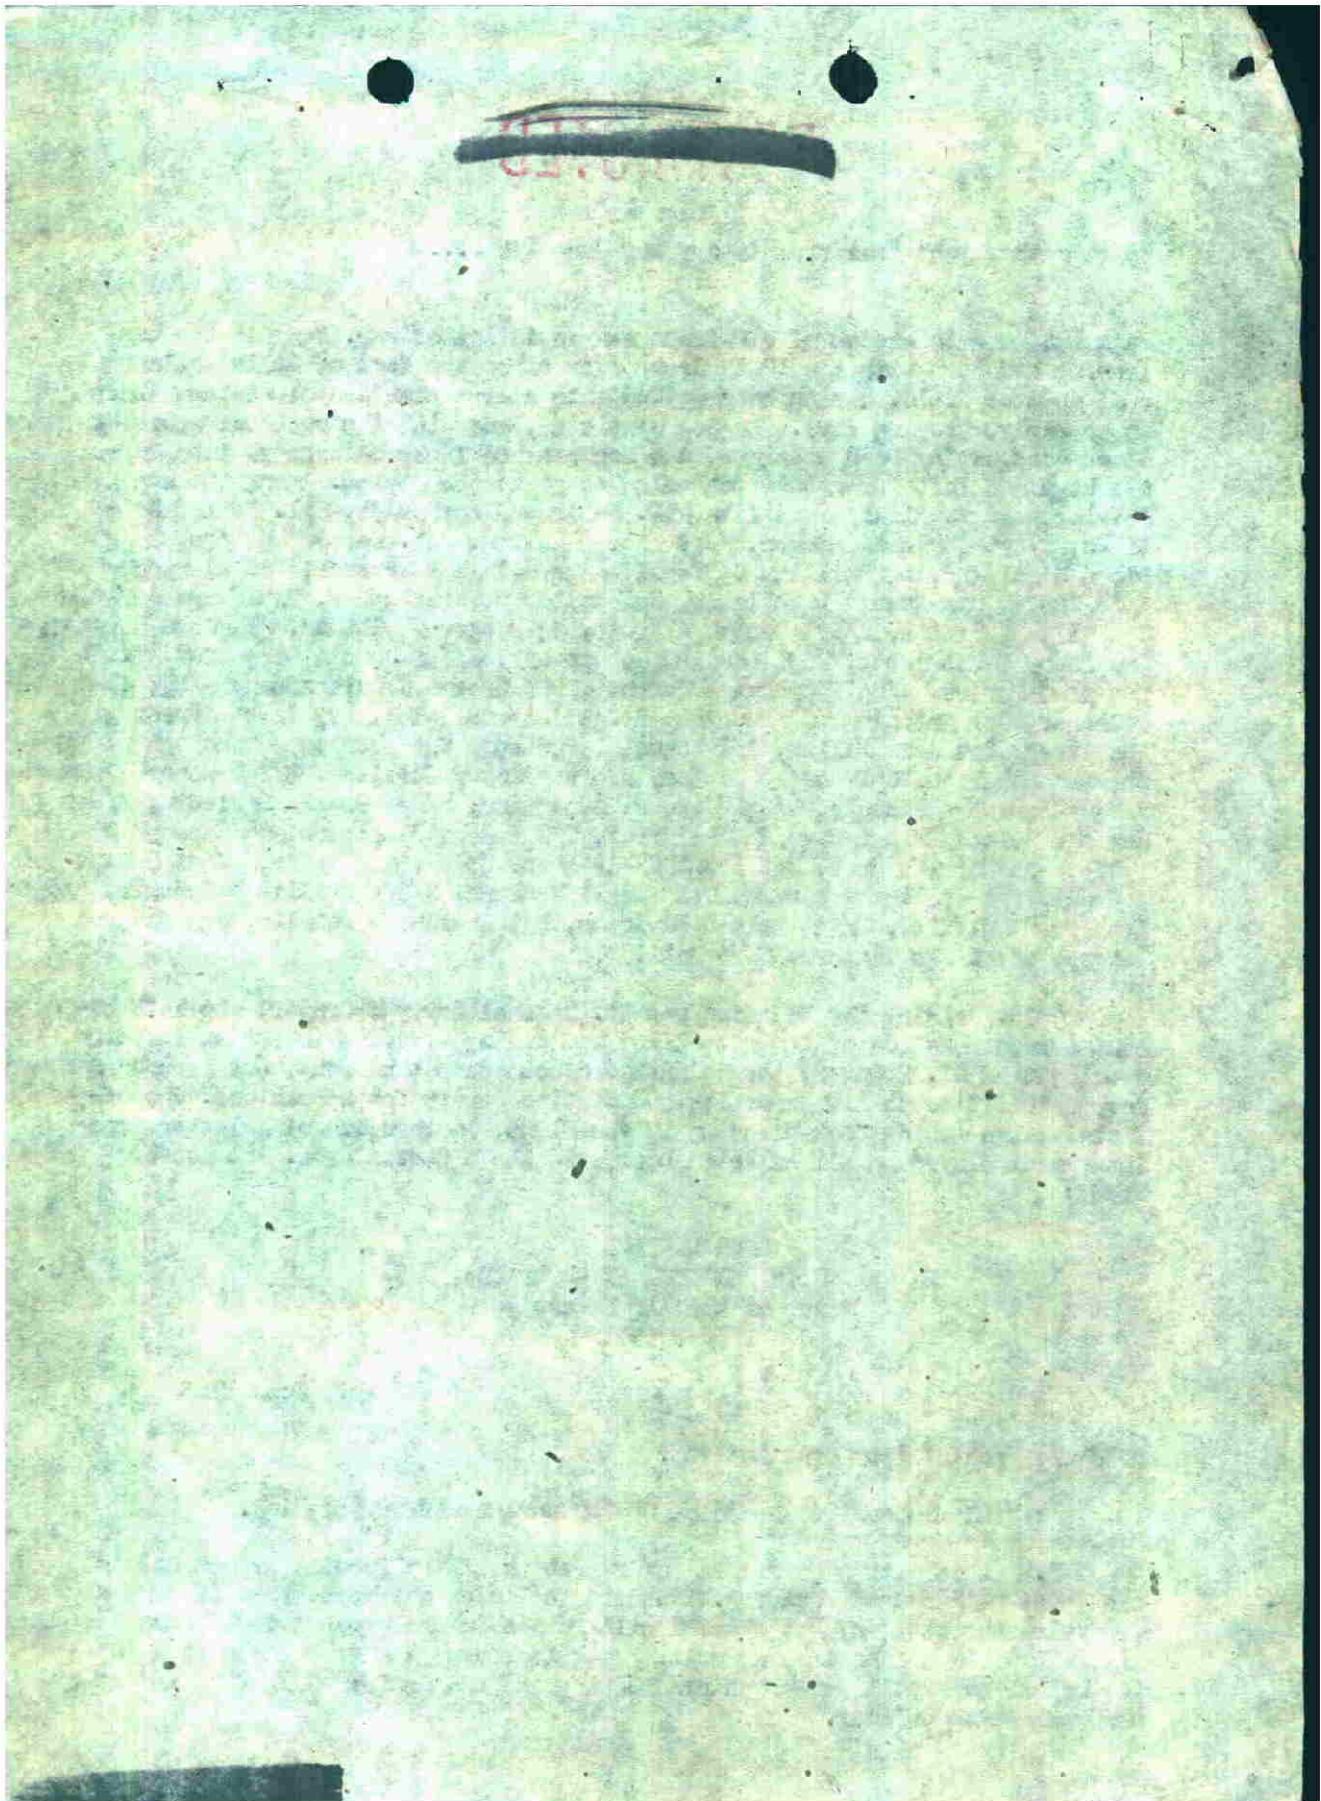

SUBJECT: Relief From Organization.

TO : All members Of The 351st Bombardment Squadron (H), AAF.

1. It is with a great deal of regret that I relinquish my command of the 351st Bombardment Squadron. I should feel much more concerned if I were departing the station, but since I will remain in the group I feel there will always be a home in your unit. For this reason I have written this letter rather than calling a squadron meeting and announcing my leaving and your new commanding officer.

2. I can say here, without hesitation, that in my six years of commissioned service I have never been privileged to work with and take credit for such a fine organization of men. I consider the most fortunate single thing that occurred since coming overseas was my assignment to the 351st. I approached my work as if it were to be a life time assignment and now that the time has come for me to go my wish is that this could only be true. Every commander, though, must think of the time when he will be relieved and his tasks be taken over by a successor. I know that you will give your new commanding officer, Major Milling, the same whole-hearted cooperation that you have demonstrated to me in the last six months. I am sorry that I could not get to know each one of you individually in all sections, but you no doubt appreciate that this is difficult with such a large total strength. Likewise, nothing could have given me greater pleasure than to see scores of you deserving men advanced to ratings which your long and unremitting efforts certainly warrant.

3. I hope the near future will permit all of you with high point scores and even others to be returned to your homes and families.

4. You have, each one of you, done an enviable job. May the best fortune and success go with you all. This I write as one who shall be forever grateful for your association.

(Signed)
HARRY F. CRUVER,
Lt. Col., Air Corps,
Air Executive.

Major John B. Milling assumed command of the 351st Bombardment Squadron. In a meeting prior to pay call on 30 June, the Major spoke to the men in a serious vein, frankness being the keynote. Any movement to be made by the Squadron would be discussed with the personnel. There were to be no secret shifts, and all news pertinent to their welfare would be made public. He divulged the news that that move to the Continent was scheduled for 20 August, and that we were to be stationed at a little town called Lechfield. The meeting was adjourned for pay call, after which the shuffling of pasteboards and the rattle of ivory cubes predominated.

During the month, the three pet peeves of the G.I. life reared their heads in ever-increasing fury, taking much joie out of vivre. In general order of detestation, 1. K.P., 2. Guard Duty, and 3. Inspections. Guard duty, which had been hitherto pulled approximately once every three months, was stepped up to more than once a month, as the Squadron had to furnish eight men per day under the new set-up of a twenty-four hour guard. K.P.'s were detailed for seven day duty. Inspections were held every Saturday morning, and the results were gratifying.

Calisthenics were held three times per week, and until the Squadron was quartered in a field, lengthy treks were made out to the line, where the men did the Air Corps Hop, push-ups, and attempted to hit an inoffensive ball over an interfering net. A farmer living next to the Squadron living site was extremely gracious about the men using his field as the center of softball. The field became the battlefield for close pitchers battles of the 23-18 variety. Throw-ins from the outfield usually ended up by conciding infielders on the head, and bunts were beaten out for home runs. A good time was had by all....

During the month, Captain Eugene J. Kraft was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for his work in the Ammunition and Ordnance Sections, and S/Sgt Archie L. Abney also received the Bronze Star Medal for his achievements in the Group Training Office.....Three Distinguished Flying Crosses were awarded, to 1st Lts. Robert M. Wells, and Lawrence J. Lazzari and Captain Robert C. Ellis.

The Squadron took part in the Casablanca missions, during which 1296 passengers were carried from England to North Africa, a feat accomplished without an accident.

The month ended as the men of the organization dropped their shillings into a box marked "Beer Party Money." And so the 351st awaited July.
